It has finally become clear to me why it seems that a significant advertisement in the app is also included. First of all, the interface is easily the best I have yet seen. It's simple, intuitive, and attractive. I'm a 2008 Beginner / Intermediate user; I've used Photoshop for years. I can use it as well as use any of the other programs in my workflow. It took me less than 2 hours to get the hang of AE & video editing. I realized I could certainly use Photoshop full-time if I really wanted to. But I can also use GIMP, an Inkscape background, and my Mac Effects workflow. It's perfect for me. I've been using Photoshop for a long time, almost five years now. It has many things that other similar software don't have, like being able to finally create a single interface that includes everything I need in one place. Its high speed editing and incredibly powerful features really prove it's worth. I highly recommend it for the masses. Although Photoshop CC's interface has been in the works for a long time, it's as good or better as any I've used. The ability to use a single interface for all my art is a particular boon, giving me more screen space for other tasks. The new Photoshop has the right amount of options for a new user, without overwhelming a more experienced one. I use old Photoshop stiller for day to day and this new Photoshop for creative work.
