It's been a long time coming, but one day, The Matrix: Reloaded and Reloaded will be released on DVD. However, a lot of the best scenes in the movie only made it to the big screen in the animated form they're seen in in the present day. Now that the score for Matrix 3 is out, we have a few different versions to look at. The original Motion Picture Score was performed by Vangelis (of Blade Runner fame), and it's a fairly standard theme. It's not as iconic as "1" or "4" (the two themes that stuck with me most in the first Matrix), but it works and makes the movie. And the third Matrix movie is nearly a year away, but it's no mystery when the song that will be the theme for the third film was recorded. Created by Hans Zimmer (in the same way that the "Oracle's Song" and the "Bene Gesserit Theme" were created for the first two films), it's called "Second Awakening". For those who don't know, "Second Awakening" is a rather somber theme that starts off simply, then builds to a cres
