So I truly admire my new camera yet once I saw the first image I created my Best Photo is the one with my husband. I was so initiated. Then I decided to try my other camera. Then I copied the image to PS pro then adds another filter, then another I do for 2 more hours and run out of battery, so I am going to record this day when power back on. We don't let our hobby photography get boring. I love it when we remember to showcase our love for those things that we love that we enjoy doing. I think the best use of photography is to share the beauty and uniqueness of nature with those around you. The classic stills and images used in print media and online publications serve this purpose. I know my camera is great. So I tried the camera in another angle, lower. I can never get it right. It's always too dark or so bright. Contrast is always off and I don't seem to get the right settings. I was trying to find the best shot when my hubby came back to the cafe with a sick kid.

The conversation was a bit more intense than usual but it all ended ok. Just before leaving he asked me if I take photo with my other camera. So I opened PS and copied the image from my phone and added another filter and change the saturation a little bit. We tried to evaluate several filters but nothing looks like the first photo. So that's why he said when do you take your picture. So I choose the photo I created with my new camera. I was so proud.

The kids usually joke about this! 8-year-old is fond of telling how proficient he is in "Photoshop". He picks it to make anything he likes, like his mom's stuff, colorful and flashy. It's true, he has it mastered yet the quality of his artwork actually is pretty lousy. Nonetheless, it's fun to watch him play with the program. We have downloaded a few books for him to read to help enrich his vocabulary.

If I had to choose my favorite version of Photoshop back then, it would be CS3. In hindsight, I wish I would have chosen CS3. It allowed me to actually learn what each tool could do, and it wrapped it all up in a truly intuitive user interface. For me, the editing was the easy part on PS. It also let me get to know the software easily. This might be why I like undo. The best for beginners tutorial was the "Hello World" series on YouTube. The intro tutorial gives the beginner everything he or she needs to know, but some Adobe commercials seem to imply that the old versions don't have as much as the later versions. Recently transferred to the App Operations team and working in the office so I get to play with everything under the hood.
